From the Desk of Fr. Dan

"What're you doin' tonight? You got no place to go, gotta get out of the city [Fort Ashby/Ridgeley]. Why don't you come along with me? Mighty fine out tonight, get your girl and hold her tight. We can take it nice and easy, you know it won't be long, 'til we'll be, we'll be...down by the lazy river, come as you please. Down by the lazy river, one big family. If you're all alone you won't be long, just bring your guitar and sing your song. Down by the lazy river, everybody follow me."

Who remembers this song? And who sang it? If you guessed the Osmonds, you'd be right. A good rockin' song from them from the early '70s. It's a toe tapper for sure. Ladies, back in the day, did you have a crush on Donny or one of the other brothers? Guys, back in the day, did you have a crush on Marie? I was old enough but also young enough to remember the "Donnie and Marie" show. I remember liking Marie, she was a cutie.

Why this song? Well, we're in the part of the year where people are venturing out for vacations, whether near or far. Some of you have your camps down by the lazy river where you hang out with family and friends for the weekend. Some venture off to other destinations to get away for awhile and enjoy spending time alone with family. It's always good to get away for a spell, relax and get the batteries recharged, ready to get back to real life and all that it brings with it. We all need a break to relax for some time, it's good for the mind, body and spirit. Speaking of spirit, just because we're on vacation doesn't mean we get a vacation from our faith - all the things we do when we're home to foster our faith we should continue to do on vacation: We can still pray, do our devotions (if we have any), read scripture, attend Mass if it's possible, and continue to support your local parish church (wink, wink, nod, nod). So, while you're away, relax and certainly enjoy, but always stay connected to your faith. By the way, while you're away, remember to break out the Yo-yo, and remember that One Bad Apple doesn't spoil the whole bunch.

I want to thank all who braved the heat for the Curves game last Sunday. It was a scorcher for sure, and I understand why some who signed up decided not to go. I was talking to Dylan, our ticket sales rep, who suggested we take a look at other times of the year. Maybe that would draw more people to go. June, July and August are notorious for heat. Maybe going in April, May or even September might be better. It's something to think about for next season. We could also do a night game, like the August faith night game that was available, but that hasn't generated much interest, which makes sense to me. It's a work night; the game starts at 6:00 PM; probably not getting home until 10:00 PM or so. It's probably not appealing to most; me included. We can think about what we want to do for next season. Again, thanks to all who came out for the game. Too bad the Curve lost, 2-1. They played the Richmond Flying Squirrels, a San Francisco Giants affiliate.

Here you be:

I can't stop singing, "What's New Pussycat." It sounds like a case of Tom Jones Syndrome. Is that common? It's Not Unusual.

Somebody asked me what to do with leftover bacon. I told them I'd never heard of that kind of bacon.

Did you hear about the cheese factory in France that exploded? No I didn't, that's awful. There is "Da-Brie" everywhere.
